A Biomedical Engineer in the Making

Hayford is a first-generation collegian. His farmer father died when Hayford was in his final year of high school. His mother was a trader, but four surgeries have left her unable to work. His parents couldn't save for his education. He lives with his grandmother, a farmer, and food vendor, who takes care of a family of eight children.

Hayford helped his grandmother during school breaks so she could save for his education. But her income was too little to support him through college.

Yet, Hayford wanted to study mechanical engineering because of its diversity and good prospects. He also wants others in his family to go to college. After his Bachelor's degree, he plans to continue his studies toward becoming a biomedical engineer.

We hope our scholarship will ease his way to his ambitions for himself and his family.
