

Sophia Abbiw's story

Called To Become A Community Health Nurse

My name is Sophia Abbiw from Komenda in the Central Region of Ghana.

Currently, I am pursuing a three-year degree in Community Health Nursing at the College of Community Health Nursing in Winneba also in the Central Region.

My passion is to provide care to children, the elderly, and the needy, as a way to help prevent and curb the spread of communicable diseases within my community. I also hope to secure a job after school and become financially independent while serving my community and its environs to fulfill my career goal. That dream was almost truncated due to the financial challenges of my parents. Thankfully, the JEQ Foundation will sponsor me through my years of study, including payment of my tuition and hostel fees.

I am grateful to the JEQ Foundation and its donors for their timely intervention to support my dream becoming my reality.

My parents and I are forever thankful to the JEQ Foundation!
